Attending veterinarian and adequate veterinary care (dealers and exhibitors).

There were 7 weaned pups from 2 litters in an enclosure that had multiple scabs and large areas of flakey skin on their head, neck and body. The representative stated that it had been observed about 3 days prior to this day and the pups had been shaved and given baths with Adams medicated shampoo. The puppies also appeared slightly thin, which can be an indication of inadequate nutrition or parasites; however, the pups were active and eating and curious. A veterinarian had not been contacted for diagnosis and treatment for these conditions, which is important to prevent any worsening of the conditions.

A veterinarian must be consulted for proper diagnosis and treatment for these puppies' conditions. Treatment recommendations by the veterinarian must be followed at all times. The licensee must keep and maintain medical records, as required, and they must be made available to APHIS officials.

Correction date: June 3, 2024 Note: The dogs were examined by a veterinarian on May 31 and a treatment plan was developed, and medication was dispensed.
